Study and Prepare for the Examination

When studying for an exam, only study the parts you don't know already. Start studying for your exam early, so that you can ask your teacher or TA if you have any problems. Take advantage of all the things your teacher might provide before the exam.

When studying for an exam, remember that not everything that has been covered in class will be tested. Ask your teacher about it. Don't study anything that is unlikely to be asked in the examination.

When studying, it could be good to write down the questions you think might be relevant. Put them all on separate index cards or papers. Then, as you read, make notes that answer each question. Start by reading through the chapters in a fast pace, that way you will become familiar with all the material. If you come across an answer to one of your question, put a mark next to the text, or note the page number and the paragraph on a separate paper. That way you will easily find the important information later on. After you've done that, read through the chapters again, and if the first paragraph doesn't have anything to do with your exam, ignore it.

Highlight everything you don't know while reading, and focus on studying these particular aspects. Figure out which way to learn the material works best for you. You can use flash cards for definitions of important words, just make sure that you get the definition right. Maybe you learn better by writing everything down as a kind of essay, or by just scribbling down notes as you read.

What is a Career Objective

Career objective is an introduction and orientation to the prospective employer as to why he is receiving your resume. Following your name, address, and contact information at the top, This gives the employer a quick idea as to what the professional is seeking.

With this, the reader can make a quick decision as to whether the company can really provide what the professional is seeking.

A clear and focused objective helps you target your job search and communicate more effectively with potential employers.

Good Career Objective Examples (i) Should be Specific: Clearly identify facts about a work situation. (ii) Should Be Directional: Focus on your future to identify steps to take and information to seek. Your focus can be short- or long-term. (iii) Should Be Personal: Others may share similar goals, but your objective should state your goals in terms that you are comfortable with. (iv) Should Be Action-oriented: You take control of your life and communicate to an employer what you can do in action terms. (v) Should Be A Commitment: Stating a goal identifies who you are and what you want to achieve.
